STATE HIGHWAY BOARD MEETS IN COUNTY

Luncheon Thursday In Placerville Welcomes Commission Informally

The members of the State Highway Commission, Director of Public Works Frank W. Clark and his assisting staff, will be in El Dorado County during the weekend in connection with the regular August meeting of the Highway Commission, to be held Friday at Lake Tahoe.

Paying appropriate respect to the importance of the occasion, civic leaders in Placerville and at Lake Tahoe have arranged a series of special events intended to convey to the visiting group a welcome of warmth, and to insure their entertainment during leisure hours.

The first of these will be a public luncheon Thursday noon at Hotel Raffles, arranged with the assistance of State Senator H. E. Dillinger under the auspices of the El Dorado County Chamber of Commerce.

Reservations may be placed at Hotel Raffles.

Senator Dillinger will be chairman for the luncheon and an informal program will be intended to provide opportunity for the members of the Highway Commission to make the acquaintance of some of the people of El Dorado County prominent in civic endeavor.

Continuing during the afternoon to Lake Valley, the Highway Commission, Director Clark and others of the delegation will be honored at a dinner Thursday evening at Glavin's at Tahoe, and during the evening the visitors will have the opportunity to renew their acquaintance with resorts and summer (Continued on Page Three)

Irving Touring Fruit Markets

CFE President Wishes More Of Growers Could See Distribution Points

James A. Irving, of Fruit Ridge, president of the California Fruit Exchange and of the Placerville Fruit Growers' Association, left Sacramento Tuesday evening on the steamship for a visit in eastern fruit markets and distribution points.

His plans were to be away about three weeks, visiting private and auction markets in Chicago, New York, Boston and Buffalo among other centers, and making an effort to extend his acquaintance among the distributors and to meet as many as possible of the fruit retailers and solicit their point of view on some of the problems of the industry.

Mr. Irving confessed that although his trip is in the interest of the California Fruit Exchange and all of its members, he will be especially interested, too, in El Dorado County fruits and what happens to them.

"I am hopeful of bringing back something that will be helpful to our growers associated with the Exchange and I wish it were possible for more of our growers to make a trip east to see first-hand the condition of their fruit upon arrival there," Mr. Irving said.

"It would be a revelation to many of the growers. Regardless of how careful they are on this end in packing it, a great change takes place in transit and you would hardly know some of the fruit as being the same package you prepared at this end."

ACCOMPANYING members of the State Highway Commission on their visit to Placerville Thursday enroute to Lake Tahoe for their regular August meeting on Friday, will be Frank W. Clark, Director of the State Department of Public Works.

MONDAY WILL BE HOLIDAY

Food Stores Will Close By Mutual Agreement, Survey Reveals

Monday, Labor Day, will be generally observed as a holiday in the county seat.

Although the day is not one of the several enumerated by city ordinance as a "closing day" for service stores, a survey indicates that by mutual agreement, all food stores in the community will be closed on Labor Day.

Federal, state, county and city offices will be closed on Monday as will the Placerville Branch of the Bank of America and the office of the Inter-County Title Company.

The postoffice windows will be closed. Service to box-holders will be as usual.

There will be no issue of this newspaper on Labor Day.

COUNTY INDIGENT AID ROLL SHOWS NET JULY DROP

Indigent cases in El Dorado county totalled 47 on July 31, down 10 from the 57 cases receiving direct aid from the county on June 30, according to a study of county indigent aid in California counties and the effect of the abandonment of the SRA on county indigent rolls, just completed by California Taxpayer association. During the month of July, the association found six cases were added to the indigent rolls and 16 were closed.

Over the state as a whole, the association stated, there was an increase of 11,899 county indigent cases and at that same time about 3,000 WPA cases were cut off to become a potential load on local welfare agencies. Only thirty counties showed increases in their indigent rolls, the association found. Twenty-one had fewer cases at the end of July than at the end of June and six counties showed no change.

AGRICULTURAL DEFENSE COMMITTEE MEETING ON THURSDAY

The members of the county agricultural committee on national defense have been called to a meeting on Thursday afternoon at the Farm Advisor's office.

Principal business of the meeting will include an appraisal of farm equipment in the county and needs for replacement and repair during the next year, a question which apparently arises as a result of considerations for the distribution of metals in the national defense program.

The members of the committee include Louis Enzler, chairman, Ivan W. Lilley, secretary, and Lee Veerkamp, H. M. Lumsden, Edwin F. Smith and Wayne Phelps, all departmental heads in the agricultural field in the county.

Mrs. R. A. Barnes of Five Mile Terrace is in charge of the May Den Shop this week while Mrs. Byers is on a buying trip to Los Angeles.

Albert Lewis is expected this evening from Phillips Station, where he has been employed during the summer, and will continue Friday to Berkeley, returning to his studies at the University.

SOVIETS CLAIM NAZI DRIVE REPULSED

London Says Lack Of News From Central Front Is "Disquieting," Japs Warned

HELSINKI, Finland (UP)—The gigantic reflection of a fire on the other side of the Finnish gulf was believed to indicate today that Tallinn, besieged capital of Estonia, was afire.

It was believed either that the Russian forces might be burning the town, preparatory to evacuation by sea, or that the German planes had started the fire.

MOSCOW, (UP)—Red army forces, waging furious battle along the entire front, were reported today to be fighting off German and Finnish drives on Leningrad and Russian planes were said to be throwing back the onslaughts of great Nazi air armadas on the former capital. The Soviet afternoon communique used no place-names and reported only that Russian troops fought heavily during the night all along the front.

British Nervous

LONDON, (UP)—Authoritative sources said today that the German forces driving on Leningrad from the Novgorod area to the north of Lake Ilmen were believed now to be endangering the Leningrad-Moscow railroad and that lack of news concerning progress of the Russian counter-offensive in the central Gornel area was disquieting.

Turkey Negotiates

LONDON, (UP)—Secret negotiations are proceeding at Tehran for a Russo-British-Iranian agreement which would forestall a possible lightning drive into Turkey, it was reported in diplomatic quarters today. (Continued on Page Three)

City's Tax Levy Raises $33,000

Per Capita Cost, Based On Census Figures, Was $10.77 For Past Year

Per capita taxes in the city of Placerville were $10.66 in 1939, went to $10.85 in 1940, and amounted to $10.77 for 1941, a study of local tax levies by California cities, just completed by California Taxpayers' association, shows. Per capita levies for each of the fiscal years are based on population of the city as shown by the 1940 census, the association stated.

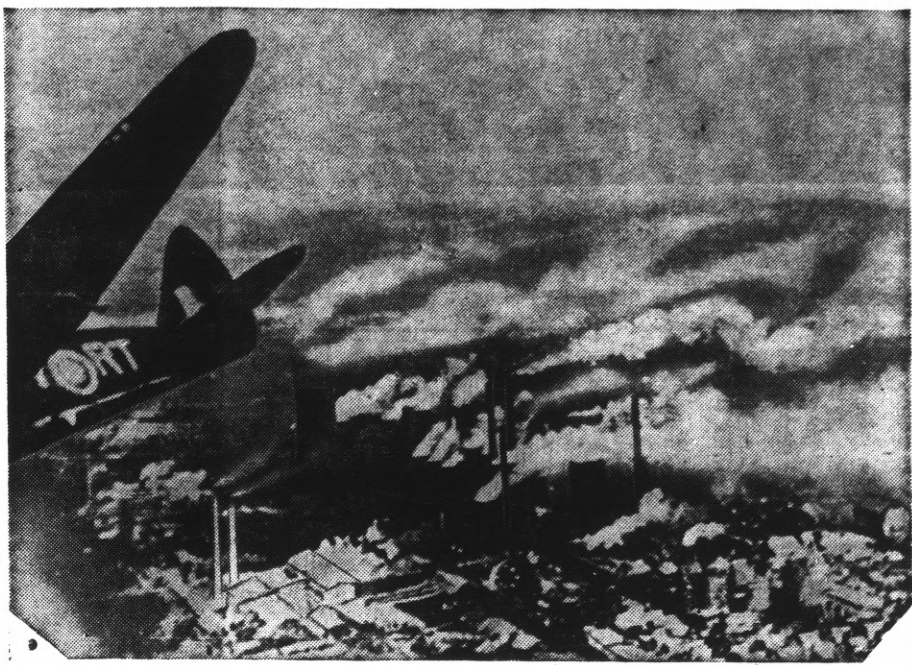

Total property taxes levied by the city government amounted to $32,656 in 1939, $33,254 in 1940, and $33,009 in 1941, the association found. Such property taxes are only a part of the revenues of cities, the association stated, pointing out that in addition income to the cities comes from grants and subventions as well as from licenses, fees, fines, etc. In addition to the city tax levies, the association stated, people in the city pay taxes to support the Federal, state, county, school, and in most cases, district governments, as well.

"The tax bills which the local governments in California will present to the people in November will be set by September 1," the association declared. "However, ten months of the 1941-42 fiscal year remain, ten months during which citizens, public officials, and public employees can do their utmost to limit their demands upon government and hold public expenditures to a minimum."

"Two worthwhile results, and the public from the citizen's and the public employee's point of view, will result from a hard-fisted control of public spending during the remainder of the present fiscal year," the association continued. "First, the expenditures for this year, which will be used as a starting point for next year's budget, will be as low as is practicable. Second, as large a surplus as possible will be available to reduce the taxes which must be levied to support government in California next year."

"There is little prospect of any reduction in federal tax demands in the near future," the association declared. "Any reduction in local expenditures during the rest of this year, by that amount, reduce the inroads into the people's pockets which heavier federal taxes will make."

Airman's View of RAF Mass Raid on Germany

This remarkable photo, flashed by radio from London to New York, was taken from a B-24 bomber taking part in one of the mass raids on Germany by the British Royal Air Force. The bomber has just dropped its lethal load on the Cologne power stations at Knapack, Germany, and clouds of smoke rise from the burning structures.

PER CAPITA DEBT TOLD

Each Person Owes $32.16 For Purely Local Expenses Covered By Bond Issues

The people of El Dorado county owed $32.16 each for county, school, city, and special district debt on June 30, 1940, according to a study of bonded debt in California counties, just made public by California Taxpayers' association. In addition to this debt of local governments in the county, the association pointed out, the people owe their share of the indebtedness of the state and federal governments.

Bonded debt in the county amounted to $425,500, the association found. Included in this was $24,000 for county debt, $280,500 for school districts, and $121,000 for municipal indebtedness. The figure for special and assessment districts is incomplete, the association stated, debts of some irrigation, reclamation, water, etc., districts not being reported.

Pointing to the steadily increasing federal indebtedness, which amounted to $48,961,000,000 at June 30, 1941, an average of $371.85 for each and every one of the 131,669,275 people in the United States at the time of the 1940 census, and which, with the huge spending for national defense, is constantly building up toward the present federal debt limit of $65,000,000,000, the association said:

"The need for both men and materials for national defense should take first place in consideration of any proposal for increased bonded indebtedness by any governmental subdivision. Absolute necessity should be the measure of any bond proposal, for the people must not only pay for the bonds, but they must pay the interest charges which run during the life of the bonds, and in addition they must pay for upkeep and maintenance of whatever the bonds finance. Any proposal for government luxuries to be financed by bonds or by current taxes, should be decisively rejected by the people in these days when national defense and the taxes to pay for national defense have priority in the lives and efforts of the American people."

AIRLINERS FLY TO START INTER-ISLAND SERVICE IN HAWAII

OAKLAND (UP)—Three 24-passenger airliners left Oakland airport today on a 2400-mile overwater flight to Honolulu where they will be placed in inter-island service in the Hawaiian area.

The flight will be the longest cross water delivery of commercial land planes ever attempted. Each plane carried extra tanks of gasoline in the cabin to increase the fuel load from 820 to 1650 gallons.

The planes, Douglas DC-3's, are consigned to inter-island airways, a subsidiary of the Matson Steamship lines. They cruise at 180 miles per hour and carry 24 passengers besides a stewardess and the flight crew.

GAS RATION CARDS ARE FAVORED

Downey Holds Rationing Of "All Consumer Commodities" As Inflation Alternative

By GEORGE E. REEDY, JR. United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, (UP)—Sen. Sheridan Downey, D., Calif., today demanded a rationing card system for the control of gasoline consumption along the eastern seaboard and suggested that rationing of all consumer commodities probably would be the only alternative to inflation.

Sen. D. Worth Clark, D., Ida., agreeing with Downey, asserted that the administration's failure to issue gasoline rationing cards was indication that "they have not considered this (shortage too seriously) themselves."

A senate committee begins an investigation of the gasoline situation tomorrow.

President Roosevelt told his press conference late yesterday that the gasoline shortage would be eased next spring, unless a mayor German offensive in the North Atlantic requires that more American oil tankers be turned over to Great Britain. New tankers and two new oil pipelines from southwest oil fields are being rushed, he said.

In proposing rationing of all consumer commodities, Downey said that defense orders would create about $25,000,000,000 in purchasing power next year.

"That purchasing power will not meet with an adequate supply of consumer goods," he said, "and the result will probably be the beginning of inflation."

Vehicle Fees Apportioned

Population Basis Gives County $1,304.58 Of License Fund For Quarter

James M. Carter, Director of the Department of Motor Vehicles, on Wednesday announced the apportionment of $415.35 to Placerville as its share of motor vehicle license fees for the quarter ending June 30th, last. The apportionment is based on a population of 3,064 in Placerville and 13,229 for the county, as given by the last federal census.

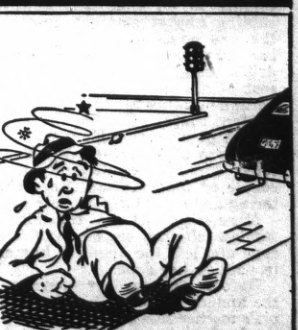

Carter also announced El Dorado county will receive the sum of $1,304.58 as its share for the same quarter.

The local apportionments are a part of a total of $1,702,926.24 available to all cities and counties and the general fund after the deduction of $89,766.60 for administration and $2,830.92 for contributions to the state retirement fund were made. Under the law, the general fund receives 20 per cent, the counties 40 per cent and the cities 40 per cent.

The apportionment was made on a population of 5,024,918 for the cities and 6,907,387 for the counties. Motor vehicle license fees are now collected by the state in lieu of the personal property taxes formerly assessed on motor vehicles by cities and counties.

Mrs. M. P. Bennett, Mrs. Max Baer, Mr. and Mrs. Preston King and Miss Helen Baer left Wednesday morning for Lake Valley with plans to return to Placerville on Friday.

Late Summer Fashions

A dress for two seasons.

By VERA WINSTON

A WISE shopper looking for a frock just now, wants something that looks right for late summer and still won't be out of place in early autumn. One such model is this useful dress of beige stocking rib jersey with a band of brown down the front that forms a little turn-down collar. The sleeves are full with a tight wrist. The square yoke has gathers at the shoulders and across the chest.

Gas Rationing Is Favored

ning of an upward price spiral. The taxes cannot meet the situation and I can see no other answer but rationing cards for all consumer purchases.

"Of course, I do not know all the facts concerning the gasoline shortage on the east coast, but if the shortage does exist the only feasible method for meeting it, I believe, is through rationing cards. Cutting deliveries to dealers does not appeal to me as a means of cutting down consumption of motor fuel."

Clark said motorists could obtain full tanks of gasoline now by merely driving from station to station, acquiring a few gallons at each stop. He said he had been told of one station operator who merely required his customers to drive around the block between each five gallons they purchased.

Sen. George D. Aiken, R., Vt., challenged a statement by acting defense coordinator Ralph Davies that gasoline stocks on the eastern coast were limited to a 10-day supply. He asserted he had been informed by the American Petroleum Institute that there were sufficient stocks to keep automobiles on the eastern seaboard going for the next 20 months.

CHAPTER I

In the two only important matters of existence, birth and death, Minnie had physiological and first hand experience. Very early in life she had contact with both phenomena in the two tenement rooms her parents, brothers and sisters called home, in the gas house district down in the shadows below the rich residents of Sutton Place in New York City.

To Min the only sign and token of a system of human relations, formulated to guide or restrain one in his brief activity between getting into the world and getting out of it, was the cop on the corner. As the idol of children a fireman might be the cop or even surpass him in one were fortunate enough to behold him coming down a ladder through the smoke with a man, woman or child or a pet kitten or pooch; but, on the average, the cop had the jump on the fireman for he was in sight nearly all the time. He was the Ten Commandments bound in blue.

The child never learned to steal, perhaps because there was nothing worth much in the two rooms of the Fogarty's, and the candy in the little shop next to the speakeasy on the corner was kept under glass.

Min was a good little girl. Her three brothers and two sisters had grown up and had drifted away somewhere by the time Minnie reached the glad moment of life when she could take a wash in the wooden tub without assistance and could sleep without becoming entangled in brotherly and sisterly legs and arms.

Her mother was taken to a hospital for an operation a short time before her father died. For ten days, he had ached in every joint from the flu, and he thought that whiskey was the only remedy for that mysterious ailment. So he brought a quart bottle home with him, every night, along with the groceries and a bag of coal for the kitchen stove until—

Early one morning her father groaned so terribly that Min got up and lighted the blessed candle. Then she shook up the fire. It was the hour before daybreak and there was no one upon whom the child could call and no likelihood of getting a doctor. A look out into the snowy darkness did not reveal Officer "Flatfoot" Cassidy who would have come clattering to the call of anyone living on his beat.

All that little Min could do was to keep repeating prayers in the dim light of the holy candle. Its flame went out suddenly. . . . It took a long time to find a match. . . . Then came the end to pain and the groanings of her father. Another laborer had gone to eternal rest.

On account of the poison booze factor it was a morgue case and that saved considerable trouble; besides, Minnie had no money for a regular funeral. Yet her cup of woe was still unfilled.

A neighbor's later inquiries at the hospital brought the news that Mrs. Fogarty had not survived the operation.

Minnie had been told that she was thirteen years old. The Children's Society would take her; there would be no more games of one-cat or potter or ring-around-the-rosy on the sidewalks of New York for her; no firemen, no cops, no newspaper Christmas tree parties, no free Summer excursions. An agent for the Society climbed the dark stairs and knocked on the Fogarty door.

"Who is it?" demanded Minnie. "Children's Society."

"All right. Wait a minute."

It was forenoon and winter was coming to an end. The sun was shining almost straight into the gas house district. Vegetable hawkers were yelling. Pneumatic drills made the most democratic sort of din in the framework of a garage building for the swells up in Sutton Place. The monkeys and guinea pigs—between experimental injections of bacilli—in the Rockefeller Foundations laboratories, a couple of blocks away, were chattering and squeaking in their cages.

Minnie pushed up the kitchen window, climbed out on the fire escape and left the agent to hammer in vain on her door.

Before starting her journey in the ambulance to the hospital, Minnie's mother had turned over to her the family fortune—forty-eight dollars and seventy-four cents in cash, a prayer book with imitation ivory covers, a breakfast supped to be of solid gold and a ticket in the California Christmas. Before her father had lain down to quaff the speakeasy hemlock and die in agony, he had dumped from his pockets to the kitchen table his only wealth—nine dollars and a few cents. These possessions Min carried with her in flight from the Children's Society agent.

Minnie at 13 was plenty old enough to realize that she was in a dilemma out of which she might not hope to have a cop help her. The Children's Society had the Law with it. The Cop was the Law, also. There was, however, Pop Dolan, night watchman at the huge brewery overhanging the East River at the end of the street. The good Lord had not created any human being with a bigger heart, a more plicant for a job with delight in his bustling eyes.

"I guess it would take you from ten to fifteen years to clean up this brewery, Min," he said finally. "It takes me all night to walk through it; that is, it used to take me all night. I don't bother with any of it except the ground floor now. They used to have these electric time boxes to punch every hour but somehow they always got out of fix." He put a shovel of coal in the stove and laughed heartily. "Then the insurance agent got a bright idea. He gave me a pedometer to wear on my leg and once a week he drops in to see how many miles I've done. Smart fellow, him! So I made one cheerful disposition and greater skill in evading certain thou-shalt-not commands printed in countless forms.

So the runaway spent a pleasant afternoon in a Second Avenue talkie, filled herself with hot dogs and buns and milk and, toward the close of the first day of being on her very own, slid into the narrow door of the outer wall of the huge building to seek Pop Dolan in his lair. He and his genial companion—a one-eyed, very dirty bull terrier with jaws of a crocodile—welcomed her to a seat beside a small potbellied iron stove, in a very dirty room, illuminated by a lantern swinging from an old gas chandelier.

"Well, they're both gone, Min," he said sympathetically. "I was wondering what was going to become of you. Have you had any supper?"

"Yes, sir," Minnie stroked the scarred head of the old pit warrior. In the soft light she made a very pretty picture, all the sweeter for the tears that glistened in eyes as blue as Killarney's lakes, believing the sadness of her little tipped-up nose and the fullness of lips that were made for smiles and kisses. There were holes in her stockings at the knees and her shoes were pretty bad but her little dark blue gown was clean and smooth and its waistband had piping of magenta. "I thought maybe I could get a job cleaning up for you, Mr. Dolan," she offered.

"Not so formal, Min," he laughed. "It's Pop to you. If I walk as far as Second Avenue, it's Pop here, Pop there—Pop! Pop! Pop!—from young and old. You'd think a soda bottling works was exploded!" He patted a bushy white mustache, tried to smooth down the most ferocious white eyebrows, rubbed a large pink nose and studied the ap-trip and jotted down the number of miles. Then I oiled up the old treadmill I used to train Terry with in the days when he was the greatest fighter that ever hit the pit, and the pedometer on the old boy, and every afternoon my dog pal spins off the distance for me. It's triflin' for him and keeps him in fine shape. The greatest old battler and friend a man ever had, he is!" Terry threw his sixty pounds into the air with a yelp of delight in appreciation of his master's strokes.

"I could get it done," said Min confidently.

"The size of you!" roared Pop. "You ought to have a governor following you around like the little swells up on the hill. You, cleaning up a brewery! And how about school, Min?"

"I've had three years, Mr. Dolan," she said gravely. "I mean Pop."

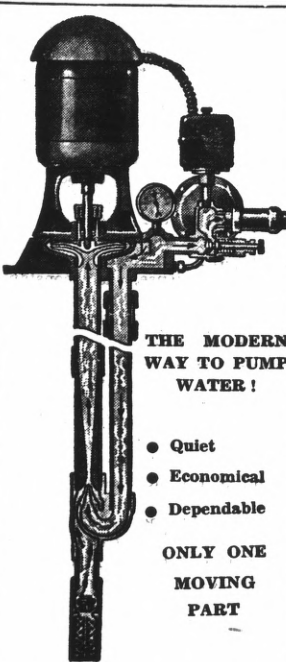

"Readin' and writin' and 'rithmetic!"

"Composition and hist'ry, geography, deportment," she added. "You do talk ed-jicated," Pop admitted. "I wish I had been blessed with a little girl just like you. But not a chick did my old woman have, Min! Not a one! That's why I turned to dogs, especially fightin' dogs. If I had had kids every one of them would have been a rousing scrapper, Min. No one has any use for anything that can't put up a fight." . . . Pop paused; then asked: "What you going to do in the way of a home, Min?"

"The Children's Society sent after me today," she replied as tears welled in her eyes.

"Don't cry, Min!" he almost shouted. "Don't cry! They haven't got you yet. So you beat it, kid!"

"Yes, sir; down the fire escape." (To be continued)

LOTUS NEWS NOTES

After a month's vacation Mr. and Mrs. Ed West and their daughter, Miss Norma West — spending it riding around through the state of Washington, Oregon and California came to our town last Wednesday afternoon from Reno, and spent the afternoon at the Rasmussen home and calling on the Reasides, the old home and place where Mrs. West's mother, the late Emma Lohry Munson was born. The old home was destroyed by fire last March and recently rebuilt by the Reasides. Mrs. Reaside being absent from home, her husband, Harry, took the West folks all through the new house which they were much pleased with. From here they went to Bowman, above Auburn, for the night and on Friday returned to their Oakland home, traveling a distance of 3500 miles in their Ford V-8. Ed West has been employed by Uncle Sam in the Oakland post-office for the past 36 years and his daughter, Norma, as a nurse, has held down her position in the Alameda county hospital for thirteen years.

Patrick J. Cronin, agent for the division of insurance of the state of California was in our town on Tuesday last calling on Charlie Rasmussen, who represents the two old companies, the Fireman's Fund and the Hartford. Mrs. J. E. (better known as "Blondy") Beckwith and her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Mainhall of Roseville, former residents of here, were in our town on Tuesday last getting some fruit for canning. They returned home by Springvale and Folsom and Mrs. Mainhall wanted to see her birthplace near that district.

James Gregson Street, eighty-seven years young, one-time El Dorado county resident, was here from Sebastopol, Sonoma county on Thursday, looking up old friends who lived near his home in the Sly Park section forty-seven years ago. He thinks Coloma is a lonesome and a somewhat dejected looking place to what it was when every man's orchard was in fine shape, and the fires had not gone over the lovely hills surrounding Coloma destroying the large trees. Mr. Steele went from here to Sonoma county where he is invested in a Gravenstein apple orchard. He is a remarkably spry old gentleman for his years.

Mrs. Pearl Rom of Sacramento visited old friends here Sunday. She will best be remembered as little Pearl Scott who was generally with her uncle, Doc Fairchild, when he made regular trips through El Dorado County carrying general merchandise.
